FROM THE OFFICE OF THE CAMPUS VICE PRESIDENT

August—one of my favorite months. In the academic community, it's the start of the year, so it always feels a little like January 1 to me. There's the anticipation of the school year, fresh goals and new students arriving on campus.

This year we will be encouraging our students to ask us questions. All greeters (thank you so much for volunteering for this important duty) will have "ask me" buttons, along with other key staff. It's important that our students feel welcomed and engaged—right from the very first day. Yes, we all do this each and every day, but for the first few weeks of the semester, let's ramp it up a bit and make it easier for them to approach us for needed information and assistance.

You're probably familiar with the concept of stickiness. Marketers spend a lot of money trying to get products and ideas to stick in our brains. One of the main ways to accomplish this is if the consumer has a personal connection or interaction. Well, we want our students to stick, too. We want them to achieve their educational goals and making a personal connection early on can be critical to a successful college experience.

Recently, my husband had orthopedic surgery at the Wellspan surgical center. On the second day I realized that every person I walked past said hello to me. I also noticed that each health care professional called my husband by name each time they were in his room. Connection. It makes a difference.

I realize it might feel a little awkward or contrived at first, but I encourage you to give it a try. Say hello to students, introduce yourself if someone looks a little lost, be more open and available for the first couple of weeks. Our customer service has always been exceptional. This is just a way to infuse some new energy into what we already do so well. Let's make it another great year!

Jean

Let’s see how far HACC can make it around the world! By uploading your photo, you are agreeing to allow HACC to use the submitted photograph in any and all printed or electronic publications. We look forward to seeing your photos. Safe travels!
